to abuse the board of health for its notice to the people of Memphis of the appearance of yellow-feyer, let us look at the position they would have been left in had they not given this notice. First, Drs. Mitchell, Thornton, Saunders, Rogers, Winn, and, I think, Dr. Tyner, visited Mulbrandon, and came to the opinion that his case was yellow-fever. After Mulbrandon's death an examination was held, and these same medical gentlemen satisfied themselves of the correctness of their before formed opinion. Dr. Mitchell, as a member of the National board of health, elegraphed the authorities at Washington;

Mr. John Johnson, of the State board, also notified the board at Nashville; Mr. Barinds, agent of the Associated Press, sent the same message over the wires to the various papers of the country. The next evening the board of health gave its notice through the evening papers, after the fact had been published all ver the Umted States. Would it not have laced the local board in a strange position had they remained silent, especially when it is called to mind that but a few weeks previous this board had pledged itself to the other boards constituting the Mississippi Valley sa citary council to inform the various boards of this council immediately the first case was known officially? Can people say that Dr. Mitchell, of the National board, could have avoided his plain duty? Will they say that Mr. Johnson should have been silent? Look the facts in the face. This ourse had to be pursued, or one of fraud and deception practiced. We have had enough of this in former years; did it ever profit us? Let those who grumble answer. No! it is ime to stop grumbling and go to work,

A communication from Minor Meriwether, on electric light, was read, and was received and filed. The thanks of the council was tendered him. The inventor, Brush, frankly stated to Mr. Meriwether that he had not been able to subdivide the light sufficiently to render it available for domestic use, and doubted whether it could be made to compete economically with gas in lighting streets. Owing to its intensity it is adapted to the lighting of large open spaces and large halls and public buildings economically, but when too much subdivision is attempted the power is diminished in a rapid ratio and it ceases to be economical for limited areas.

Prices in Prospect. We have received the excellent Liverpool cular of Smith, Edwards & Co., reviewing the month of June, from which we take the following: "The market has been exceedingly dull all month. The principal feature has been the great depression of the Manchester market, and the feeble demand from the netonka, and last week James Tiernan, Tom Hyde, John Knapp, John G. Prather, and seven thousand bales per week. The Amerimmences on the twenty-second ultimo and trast to the two preceding menths, when such lasts three days. The incessant and violent fluctuations of silver and eastern exchangeoften two or three per cent, in a week-have very much unsettled business, and made merchants afraid of venturing on distant operations; at the same time there has been an undercurrent of confidence as regards India, more particularly since the monsoon has broken auspiciously, and it is expected that a fair demand will soon be experienced from that quarter. Prices of both goods and yarns have declined materially during the month, and the margin is now worse than ever before for both spinners and manufacturers. Their condition is indeed desperate, for it is for restoring gray harr to its original color is impossible to turn round machinery without Hall's vegetable Sicilian hair renewer. Try it. of improving their position till the end of the year. Any increase of demand machinery is inevitable, and we hear of some large concerns being closed from financial ities are being restricted in several cases, and this is causing weak and insolvent concerns to close. There cannot be a doubt that many mills have been worked to a constant loss for several years, and this waste of capital is at last telling with lamentable effect on some old and respectable firms. The past month has been noted for the circulation of all sorts of unpleasant rumors in Manchester; in some cases the difficulties alluded to are believed Joseph Defenna, who was to have been hung to be tided over, but in others there is a necessity for liquidation. The ruinous results of Polite, in 1877. long years of bad trade are now showing themselves in a very painful manner, and we fear that this state of things will continue, perhaps with aggravated effect, all this year. We reckon the consumption of cotton now at barely fifty thousand bales per week. Even this is quite too large for our inadequate supplies of cotton, and a further reduction must be enforced sooner or later. A feeling of intense depression prevails all over the country, and the cloud which has so ong overshadowed it does not show signs of breaking.
